1.5 Essay Questions

1) List and define the five different categories of civil law that are frequently resolved through civil litigation.

Answer: Tort law is a category of civil law that deals with conduct that leads to injuries not considered acceptable by societal standards.

Contract law is the category of civil law that involves lawsuits to resolve unfilled legal obligations between parties.

Property law is the category of civil law that is significantly concerned with the acceptable uses of property, as well as with property ownership.

The law of succession is concerned with how property is passed from one generation to the next.

Family law is a category of civil law that is concerned with matters of marriage, divorce, child custody, and children's rights.

Objective: Explain the nature of disputes.

Level: Basic

2) Explain the similarities and differences between civil and criminal law.

Answer: Civil law is concerned with disputes between private parties, while criminal cases are often considered crimes against the government and are government-initiated.

Civil cases have punishments including monetary damages and/or injunctive relief, while criminal cases often have an incarceration component in their punishment.

Both arose out of the need to maintain a safe and structured society and promote societal norms.

Objective: Multiple

Level: Intermediate

3) Clarify and simply explain the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments and their relationship to our constitutional rights as they relate to the court system.

Answer: The Fourth Amendment protects people against unreasonable searches and seizures. It requires probable cause for any warrant to be issued.

The Fifth Amendment requires a grand jury in cases involving a capital or otherwise infamous crime. It also protects individuals against double jeopardy and from being compelled to incriminate themselves. This Amendment also includes a due process clause.

The Sixth Amendment guarantees the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury. It requires that the accused be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation and to be confronted with the witnesses against them. This Amendment also guarantees defendants the right to counsel.

The Eighth Amendment prohibits excessive bail and excessive fines, as well as cruel and unusual punishments.

The Fourteenth Amendment states that anyone born or naturalized in the United States is a citizen of the United States and of the state where they reside. This Amendment also includes a due process clause and prevents any state from denying anyone equal protection of the laws.

Objective: Summarize the guiding legal principles underlying the U.S. court system.

Level: Intermediate

1.6 Critical Thinking Questions

1) Describe the benefits and problems that are associated with having a dual court system.

Answer: Benefits are the separation of federal and state courts. The federal power, through the Constitution, is limited, and this allows states to have separate power over many aspects within that state.

Problems can arise when lines of jurisdiction are blurred between the federal and state government and the laws in each as well as conflicts between individual laws among the different states. Additional benefits and problems of a dual court system may also be addressed.

Objective: Explain the purpose and functions of courts and the dual court system.

Level: Intermediate

2) Explain the importance of the adversarial system of justice and explain how it differs from an inquisitorial system.

Answer: The adversarial system of justice entails a system of opponents, which creates an environment of a winner and a loser. The idea is that a number of key guiding legal principles exist to make sure that people are adequately protected as they participate in the court process. Presumptions, like the presumption of innocence, and safeguards, like those spelled out in the U.S. Constitution, are of critical importance in a system of criminal justice. Presumptions and safeguards protect the accused, as does our adversarial system.

In comparison, inquisitorial systems do not provide the same protections to the accused. Additionally, decision-making power is in the hands of one or a very few individuals. Juries are rarely used in these systems. Attorneys are more passive, and judges have a much more prominent role. While in an adversarial system judges focus on legal matters, in an inquisitorial system they may engage in fact-finding and perform investigations.

Objective: Multiple

Level: Difficult

3) List and define the three key elements of a crime and explain why these concepts are important to criminal law.

Answer: The three key elements of a crime are corpus delicti, actus reus, and mens rea.

Corpus delicti literally means "the body of crime." While it could mean a literal body (in a case of murder), it generally refers to some objective proof that a crime did in fact occur. Before someone may be held liable for a crime, a crime must be shown to have been committed.

Actus reus literally means "the criminal act." This refers to the need to show that the defendant committed a criminal act. If the defendant can prove they could not have committed the crime (e.g., through the use of an alibi defense), this element of the crime is not proven.

Mens rea literally means "a guilty mind" and refers to the need to show a degree of intent on the part of the defendant. There are three types of intent—general intent, specific intent, and negligence. In most cases, intent must be proven for a defendant to be found guilty of a crime. However, in strict liability crimes, an individual may be found guilty regardless of their intent.

These concepts are important to criminal law because all three must be proven before a defendant may be convicted and sentenced.

Objective: Explain the nature of disputes.
